Deborah Chambers, 2016-04-14

Media technologies have played a central role in shaping ideas about home life over the last two centuries. Changing Media, Homes and Households explores the complex relationship between home, householders, families, and media technologies by charting the evolution of the media-rich home from the early twentieth century to the present. Moving beyond a narrow focus on media texts, production, and audiences, Deborah Chambers investigates the physical presence of media objects in the home and their symbolic importance for home life. The book identifies the role of home-based media in altering relationships between home, leisure, work, and the outside world in the context of entertainment, communication, and work. It assesses whether domestic media are transforming or reinforcing traditional identities and relations of gender, generation, class, and migrancy. Mediatization theory is employed to assess the domestication of media and media saturation of home life in the context of wider global changes. The author also develops the concept of media imaginaries to explain the role of public discourses in shaping changing meanings, values, and uses of domestic media Framed within these approaches four chapters also provide in depth case studies of the processes involved in media s home adoption early television design family centred video gaming the domestication of tablet computers and the shift from smart homes to today s connected homes This is an ideal text for students and researchers interested in media and cultural studies communication and sociology
