Badcock, Frank Larøi, Paul Allen, Kelly M. Diederer, 2014-03-07 There has been a recent surge of interest in auditory hallucinations AH in schizophrenia compared to those experienced by non clinical i e healthy individuals This interest stems in no small part from a keen awareness of the fact that progress in developing more effective treatments for AH in psychosis has been seriously hampered by our limited understanding of the cognitive and biological mechanisms involved The prevailing notion that AH in clinical and non clinical populations share the same features and underlying mechanisms the continuum hypothesis has been seriously challenged by a growing list of differences as well as similarities between these groups At the phenomenological level this is exemplified in the highly negative content of AH in patients and the markedly earlier age of onset of AH in non patients Similarly several recent studies point to significant differences in cognition language lateralization and possibly dopamine function between these groups These findings have important implications for the design of future studies and raise considerable doubt about the adequacy of modelling the functional mechanisms of clinical AH on the basis of non clinical populations In short the time seems ripe to re evaluate the continuum hypothesis and provide a forum to present alternative perspectives on the functional pathways leading to AH in clinical and non clinical groups Such a forum is also timely in view of the renewed interest in AH in other non schizophrenic clinical groups again examining similarities and differences between such groups Preliminary studies for instance have shown that AH in certain clinical populations e g bipolar disorder borderline personality disorder dissociative disorder share similar phenomenological features with AH in schizophrenia However the implications of such findings are not fully understood and studies have not adequately examined potential differences between AH in these groups The goal of this Frontiers Research Topic therefore is take the opportunity to bring together research exploring differences and similarities in mechanisms of AH in clinical and non clinical groups and to stimulate the development of new explanatory models which explicitly link the phenomenological characteristics of AH with underlying mechanisms Moving Target Defense Sushil Jajodia, Anup K.
