The Journal of Albion Moonlight by Kenneth Patchen is a famous antiwar novel. At 313 pages the novel is a weighty tome and is quite difficult to go through. In addition the novel is written in a very confusing manner and it is hard to get a sense of plot out of it.

The novel can be seen as a lament on the horrors of war. Patchen's narrator Albion Moonlight is supposed to represent an ordinary man. His narration documents a journey in the physical world which is, at the same time, a journey into the farthest reaches of his inner self. The story is often interspersed with ominous prophesies about death and widespread destructions in the style of the biblical Book of Daniel and Revelation by John of Patmos.

The physical journey of the novel is concerned with going to meet a mysterious person named 'Harry Rovias' who lives in the village of Galen. The significance of the name 'Rovias' lies in its being the word 'Savior' spelt backwards. The narrator and his party depart New York and embark on the trip on the 2nd of May. The entry for the 10th of May reveals that the party is headed to meet Rovias. Other entries consist of internal dialogues about the nature of God and the feelings of terror experienced by the wanderers (Patchen, 1961).

The entry for the 19th of June consists of a meeting with Roivas in which Albion Moonlight has a long conversation with him. Later he continues a correspondence with Rovias. Throughout the journey Albion makes reports for Roivas's perusal. On the 20th of June, Albion records that a small, invisible animal called the 'entichahoosh' brought him a communication from Roivas (Patchen, 1961).

Up to page 47, the novel consists of journal entries only. After the entry for the 23rd of June, Albion decides to tell his story in the manner of a novel. The rest of the book consists of chapters of the novel along with journal notes that record the events of the journey and make comments on the novel (Patchen, 1961).

The book ends with the entry for the 27th of August wherein Albion says that he has come within sight of the house of the Savior and has seen the face of Christ look out of every window. He then repudiates himself and declares that he is lying. Albion ends the

Something to Say William Carlos Williams on Younger Poets collects all of Williams known writings reviews essays introductions and letters to the editor on the two generations of poets that followed him from Kenneth Rexroth and Louis Zukofsky to Robert Lowell and Allen Ginsberg What might have been a random collection of occasional pieces achieves remarkable coherence from the singleness of Williams poetic vision his belief that the secret spirit of ritual of poetry was trapped in restrictive molds and if these could be broken the spirit would be able to live again in a new contemporary form Only a revived clarity and accuracy in sight and expression would enable the modern world to reform social order which Williams saw in complete disarray To resuscitate American Poetry Williams concentrated his efforts on the purification of poetic speech his American idiom and on remaking the poetic line in a new measure his variable foot And while his battles with his contemporaries on these issues could be heated he was always a nurturing father to the young a useful presence a model and a liberator He told Ginsberg to pare down and economize Roethke to open up and encouraged Lowell and Levertov to shake off poetic conventions But in all his emphasis on the poem as a made object of concrete physicality or as a field of action he would return again and again to this basic advice to young writers The only thing necessary is to have something to say when at last the opportunity comes to say it A Literate Passion Anaïs Nin, Henry Miller,1987 The intimacy between Nin and Miller first disclosed in Henry and June is documented further in this impassioned exchange of letters between the two controversial writers Through the Looking Glass Richard H.
