FAQs and Maintenance

Q: Where can I find information about my system?

A: Information is available in print and electronic format. For example, your ISO certificate is in the documentation binder. Safety information is on the documentation disk. Spectrometer information is in Spectrometer Help Topics in the OMNIC software Help menu.

Q: How often should I align my spectrometer?

A: Align if energy throughput decreases or once a month. To align, run Performance Verification (PV) or, from OMNIC software, choose Collect > Experiment Setup > Diagnostic and click Align.

Q: Where can I find information about changing the source, desiccant and power supply for my spectrometer?

A: This information is in Spectrometer Help Topics and in the spectrometer user guide on your documentation disk.

Q: Where can I find information about my ATR Crystal?

A: The packing insert that came with the accessory has information about the crystal. A PDF version is also on your documentation disk.

Spectrometer Features

Performance Verification (PV)

We recommend that the Performance Verification test is run once a month. To run the test, click the Green Shield in the OMNIC main window, select Performance Verification, and then click Run.

Performance Verification checks the system, performs an alignment and checks the laser calibration. This test does not need a sample or any accessories installed.

The System Status icon indicates the current state of the system and the results of any performance tests:

Green Shield indicates that all subsystems are operating within specification and all performance tests passed.

Yellow Shield indicates that the system identified a minor problem, which should be viewed to determine the possible effects on the quality of the data collected.

Red Shield warns that the system is out of specification or a sub-system failed. It can also indicate that the last performance test did not meet specifications.
