It is important to remember, however, that the definition of the word "crime" is not the same for all people. For example, some people believe that the act of drinking alcohol is a crime, while others believe that it is not. This is because the definition of the word "crime" is based on the laws of the country in which the act is committed. In the United States, for example, the act of drinking alcohol is not considered a crime, while in some other countries it is.
