Standard scores are a way of relaying assessment information by means of comparing what is normally expected for a child of a given age as measured by a standard. Standard scores between 85 and 115 are within the average range. When using standard scores students obtaining scores of 78 or lower typically qualify as having a speech and language impairment.

Scaled scores are used in the same way, usually to report subtests from a composite test, however they do not have as much weight as Standard Scores. An average scaled score is 10, with a score of 7 being below average and a score of 13 being above average. To qualify as speech and language impaired a child must demonstrate a score 1 and 1/3 standard deviations
