1. After the 2008-2009 US stimulus introduced manufacturing jobs to manufacturing, what was the most important factor involved in the beginning of the industry's growth? (What happened before?)

One important factor was the fact that there was a lot of money in the economy that was being spent on manufacturing. This was because the government had passed a law that gave companies a tax break if they hired new workers.
2. How did companies react to a (potential) recession?

Many companies reacted by cutting back on production and laying off workers.
3. What was the impact of the 2008-2009 US stimulus on the manufacturing industry?

The stimulus package helped to create new jobs in the manufacturing industry and helped to keep the industry from collapsing.
4. What was the impact of the 2008-2009 US stimulus on the manufacturing industry?

The stimulus package helped to create new jobs in the manufacturing industry and helped to keep the industry from collapsing.

Abstract

They address young students' mathematical thinking as well as their use of language in science. Some activities include a card game played in pairs, a picture story, and a number line activity. The authors suggest that teachers consider the following questions when they use the activities in science or math:

1. Identify three other ecological conditions in ecological North America that are different from the North American continent.
Three other ecological conditions in North America are: (1) the Great Lakes, (2) the Great Plains, and (3) the Great Basin. These three regions are different from the North American continent because they are not part of the continent's land area.
2. What climate conditions in North America are different from the other North American regions?
