

Drinking and Driving

"In the United States, almost 30 people die every day in crashes that involve a driver impaired by alcohol. That's at least one death an hour."-Kathleen Smith.

Year after year, millions of people worldwide tell themselves that driving drunk is fine. Drinking and driving or driving under the influence (DUI), is when a person who is intoxicated, driving a vehicle with a blood alcohol content (BAC) of 0.08%.

The risk of a driver being impaired of alcohol and killed in an accident is about 11 times that of people driving without alcohol in their system. Even if you make it home, you are still putting you and other people's lives at risk and also the people who are driving on the road. We have Uber and Lyft in this era where driving drunk is inexcusable (Schimmel, 2019).

The greatest individuals at danger for drinking and driving are those who binge drink or those who are struggling with an alcohol use disorder (AUD) (Galbicsek, 2019). AUD means that they drink a large amount of alcohol in a short period of time and they are putting themselves at risk for harmful side effects (Galbicsek, 2019). It usually takes about 30 minutes to 2 hours for the alcohol to be absorbed into your bloodstream (Galbicsek, 2019).

During the time where the alcohol is being absorbed in your bloodstream, alcohol impairs a person's judgment and makes it unsafe to drive by delaying cognitive skills, slowing down reaction time, decreased and blurred vision and slows down a person's breathing (Galbicsek, 2019). Because of these dangerous side effects of alcohol, a person that is under the influence of small amounts of alcohol makes it dangerous for him or her to drink and drive much less large amounts of alcohol.

It doesn't matter how much alcohol you had, it can still affect your driving ability. Alcohol can cause people to get sleepy, their response time is slower, their vision is distorted, they can have blackouts, and they can go unconscious. The effects of alcohol abuse will put you at risk of causing an accident or an injury.

In order to drive safely, it requires the ability to concentrate and make good decisions. Drinking and driving can not only endanger the individual and other people's lives but it can impair your body by having poor judgment & decision making, the effects on the body and the brain, the effects of blood alcohol levels on the body, 5 different subtypes of alcoholics, increased li
