10. A. The passage illustrates the importance of understanding the role of the brain in the development of language. The author argues that the brain is not just a passive receiver of information, but an active participant in the process. This is evident in the way that the brain processes information from the environment and how it uses this information to learn and adapt. The author also discusses the role of the brain in the development of language, arguing that the brain is not just a passive receiver of information, but an active participant in the process.
