The Shanling CD T-100 CD Player

by Thorsten Loesch

Meet the Glamour Model...

This CD player made big waves ever since it was first sighted on the Website of an obscure Chinese manufacturer (first seen later in the US public's eye on the Enjoy the Music.com's PRIMEDIA 2002 show report). The Internet did it's usual thing, everyone knew about it, everybody talked about. In general, the less was known the more was talked and the more opinionated the opinions became.

Others where griping about pricing, an issue I will not go into too much, apart from saying that a Chinese Hi-Fi Shop pays Chinese rents, Chinese wages to employees and Chinese taxes. A dealer in the UK or US needs to pay UK or US rents, wages and taxes and while the Chinese dealer is likely buying from the factory the simple process of importing good into the US or UK is sufficiently messy and arcane to pretty much necessitates some form of distribution, which too has to pay UK or US rents and wages (plus shipping, import tax et al). This all adds up and makes as a result a player selling locally for $1,200 to $1,300 (USD) much more expensive than that once it goes over the Dealers Counter here in the UK or the US. With a factory recommended "international" sales price of $2,000 USD the factory ensures that professional distributors and dealers with shops (the classic "brick & mortar" guys) have enough of a profit to make a living. Hey – it's called capitalism, I did not make it. You can always take a holiday in Hong Kong or on the Chinese Mainland and buy your unit there. And you can take it back to the dealer there should something ever go wrong too.
