

American Pride: The Reasons Why I Am Proud to Be an American

Americans are not easily defined. All Americans come from different backgrounds and cultures. No two citizens are exactly the same. Each one comes from a different walk of life. This mixture of cultures brings about a mixture of ideas and beliefs. America promises to all citizens the rights to protect and embrace their differences, whether they be ideological or physical differences. This is one reason why I am proud to be an American. I am proud to be an American because of all the promises this great country has to offer to each of its citizens.

America has always valued the idea of individualism and the importance of its citizens' personal beliefs. America has continuously provided and protected the individual rights of its citizens. Individual rights include, however not limited to, the freedoms granted to citizens in the Bill of Rights, ratified in 1791. America promised its citizens freedoms such as freedom of speech, religion, assembly, and petition. These, along with other rights, were fundamental freedoms that America believed each citizen ought to be promised. Throughout America's history, including present day, people around the world have sought to deprive Americans from these freedoms. Terrorists groups from around the globe have brutally killed countless Americans for disagreeing with them. America has and always will fight to protect citizens' and future citizens' rights from the corrupt evils of the world. I am proud to be an American because America will not stand for any actions like those of terrorists to deprive Americans of our rights.

I have always admired America's will to help those in need. Not only by the actions of
