

THE PHYSICAL REALITY OF LIGHT-QUANTA.*

BY

MAX PLANCK, Ph.D.

University of Berlin;
Franklin Medallist; Member of the Institute.

To my keen regret I am prevented by pressing duties from receiving in person the high honor which The Franklin Institute has conferred upon me. Accordingly I ask permission to lay before you as a token of my profound gratitude a short communication upon a scientific question which at the present time occupies the foreground of interest.

You all know that theoretical physics, which developed and progressed consistently through two hundred years, and only a generation ago seemed near to its final conclusion, has now entered a critical period, fraught with serious consequences. Not that its fundamental principles have been questioned! For its most general and at the same time its simplest laws, such as the Principle of the Conservation of Energy, the Laws of Thermodynamics, and the Fundamental Equations of the Electromagnetic Field, are just the ones which have so far withstood successfully the most severe trials, and serve now as ever before as the guides for wider exploration. It would then be entirely incorrect to speak of a breakdown of the science. It is our mental pictures of the occurrences, in which these principles find their application, that in recent times have been thrown into confusion. Many concepts which could be counted among the simplest and the most evident in the world, have turned out to be obscure, doubtful, even contradictory, and it is certain that in many respects we must straight-away build up from the very beginning, if we are not to lose sight of the most important assumption of physical research, the compatibility of the various laws with one another.

For example, no occurrence in nature appears more simple and more obvious, alike to the layman and to the investigator, than the motion of a material body, a sphere for instance, and to this simplicity of ideas corresponds completely the simplicity of the
