STUDYING PEDIGREES ACTIVITY

Introduction: A pedigree is a visual chart that depicts a family history or the transmission of a specific trait. They can be interesting to view and can be important tools in determining patterns of inheritance of specific traits. Pedigrees are used primarily by genetic counselors when helping couples decide to have children when there is evidence of a genetically inherited disorder in one or both families. They are also used when trying to determine the predisposition of someone to carry a hereditary disease for example, familial breast cancer.

The Components of a Pedigree

Sequences are used to indicate marks in a facility.

Triangles are used to indicate formulas.

If the individual is "affected" by the trait (dominant or recessive) we define the shape.

A line between a male and a female indicates a marriage or union.

A line drawn down from the marriage line indicates offspring.

Sometimes, you will see some shapes filled in only half way. - this notation indicates a hybrid (heterozygous) or carrier of the trait

Studying Pedigrees Activity:

Youth Physical Activity and Sedentary Behavior Alan L. Smith, Stuart J.H. Biddle, 2008-07-24 As interest in the public health challenge of youth inactivity increases the ambitious Youth Physical Activity and Sedentary Behavior sets a standard for addressing a problem with worldwide implications Drawing on the contributions of a diverse group of international experts this reference challenges professionals researchers and students to implement new solutions and further their research and work No other text addresses the causes contributing factors and fundamental issues in dealing with youth physical activity with such depth or comprehensive coverage Using a multidisciplinary approach Youth Physical Activity and Sedentary Behavior breaks away from traditional thinking that places activity and sedentary behavior on a single continuum which may limit progress in addressing youth inactivity Instead the authors encourage readers to focus on how sedentary and physically active behaviors coexist and consider how the two behaviors may have different determinants In doing so the text also considers developmental features such as maturation ethnicity environment and genetics across both childhood through age 12 and adolescence the teen years By looking at a variety of psychosocial and epidemiological factors the authors set the stage for a critical analysis of beliefs and views at a time when many assumptions are taken for granted This book is organized in three parts that build on one another to deepen readers understanding of this complex problem This text begins by addressing the fundamental issues and assumptions pertaining to youth physical activity and sedentary behavior covering such topics as measurement of the behavior in question health outcomes concepts and trends in a public health context Once readers have grasped this foundational knowledge they advance to part II for a comprehensive account of personal factors likely to be associated with the problem Part III moves beyond the individual into the wider social and contextual aspects of physically active and sedentary living in young people Through this concluding part readers gain the latest thinking on how parents peers schools organized sport and related factors link to youth physical activity and sedentary behavior Each chapter presents the latest theory and research real world approaches to implementation and background information to encourage discussion and future directions in national policy making Youth Physical Activity and Sedentary Behavior also contains the following features that add to an unprecedented learning experience An at a glance look at why and how research can be used in the real world helps researchers relate their work to overall solutions Coverage of more issues related to this subject than are available in any other reference makes this a one stop resource Internationally respected foreword writer editors and contributors provide a cross disciplinary perspective valuable for putting solutions into a wider context Applications for Professionals boxes and Applications for Researchers boxes at the end of each chapter provide practical suggestions for implementing solutions Youth Physical Activity and Sedentary Behavior Challenges and Solutions considers current research about youth physical activity and sedentary behavior across a range of personal factors as well as cultural and social influences The text communicates the knowledge base on developmental economic psychological and social factors related to youth physical activity and sedentary behavior and provides an overview of youth specific approaches to addressing the problem of inactivity among youth Designs for Learning Environments of the Future Michael Jacobson, Peter Reimann, 2010-03-10 Few things are as certain as societal changes and the pressing need for educators to prepare students with the knowledge and ways of thinking necessary for the challenges in a changing world In the forward thinking pages of Designs for Learning Environments of the Future international teams of researchers present emerging developments and findings in learning sciences and technologies at the infrastructure curricular and classroom levels Focusing on ideas about designing innovative environments for learning in areas such as biology engineering genetics mathematics and computer science the book surveys a range of learning technologies being explored around the world a spectrum as diverse as digital media computer modeling and 3D virtual worlds and addresses challenges arising from their design and use The editors holistic perspective frames these innovations as not only discrete technologies but as flexible learning environments that foster student engagement participation and collaboration Contributors describe possibilities for teaching and learning in these and other cutting edge areas Working with hypermodels and model based reasoning Using visual representations in teaching abstract concepts Designing strategies for learning in virtual worlds Supporting net based collaborative teams Integrating innovative learning technologies into schools Developing personal learning communities Designs for Learning Environments of the Future will enhance the work of a wide range of professionals including researchers and graduate students in the learning and cognitive sciences and educators in the physical and social sciences
