The image shows a student's hand using a yellow highlighter to mark text in a reading passage. The passage is about primates and includes several paragraphs. The student has highlighted the following text:

- Primates have very good eyesight, and they can see in color.
- Also, all primates have opposable thumbs.
- Primate types can also be very different. Some primates weigh less than one pound, while others can weigh up to 450 pounds. The feet of primates are also very different. Some primates can not grasp with their feet, but some primates are also very different. Humans, including humans, have fingernails, while others have claws. Some primates can care for themselves. Baby primates need their mothers for several years until they can care for themselves.
- Humans, gorillas, and apes are among the smartest animals on Earth and they are all primates. Primates are very special mammals.

Below the passage, there are four questions with corresponding colored boxes for the student to write their answers:
