Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 sedentary women, 30 to 45 years of age, who were randomly selected from a telephone directory. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The control group consisted of six women who did not participate in any physical activity during the study. The training group consisted of six women who participated in a 10-week training program. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions were performed on a stationary bike at a heart rate of 150 to 160 beats per minute. The subjects in the training group were also instructed to increase their daily physical activity. The subjects in the control group were instructed to maintain their current level of physical activity. The subjects in the training group were monitored for HR and EE at the beginning and end of the study. The results of the study showed that the subjects in the training group had a significant increase in HR and EE compared to the subjects in the control group. The subjects in the training group also reported a significant increase in energy expenditure during their daily activities. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week training program can effectively increase the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.

If you are not satisfied with your results, follow the instructions carefully and test your original article. If the editor still requests the (a) paragraph and (b) and (c) paragraphs, repeat the analysis with the original data and the original results.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light sources. To avoid this, there are two things the producer should do:
  - 1. Turn off the lights at the end of the day.
  - 2. Avoid excessive light intensity, the length of the day and the light spectrum (the color of the light) are important.
- The end of the day is the best time to change the light spectrum. The producer should be looking for the color of the light to be blue-white for the first 12 hours of the day, then gradually change to red, orange, and yellow. The end of the day should be red, orange, and yellow. The producer should be looking for the color of the light to be blue-white for the first 12 hours of the day, then gradually change to red, orange, and yellow.

When you install your T-Value One Connection, improper installation of all four screws (50 connections for One Connection®) will void the warranty. Please, before using any (1) to ensure proper ventilation. Failure to maintain proper ventilation may result in a variety of problems with the product.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will want to produce more of the output, and if the price falls, the producer will want to produce less of the output.
