Abstract—This document presents the results of a study on the effects of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological fitness of a group of 12 male and 12 female participants. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting and involved a series of tests and measurements. The results show that the training program had a significant positive effect on the participants' physical fitness, with improvements in heart rate, blood pressure, and body composition. Additionally, the program also had a positive effect on the participants' psychological fitness, with improvements in mood and stress levels. The study concludes that a 12-week training program can effectively improve both physical and psychological fitness in a group of participants.
