

TABLE 5.1 Physical Methods Used to Destroy Microorganisms and Viruses
Method	Characteristic	Use
Moist Heat	Denatures proteins. Relatively fast, reliable, safe, and inexpensive.	Widely used.
Boiling	Boiling for 5 minutes destroys most microorganisms and viruses; a notable exception is endospores.	Boiling for at least 5 minutes can be used to treat drinking water.
Pasteurization	Significantly decreases the numbers of heat-sensitive microorganisms, including spoilage microbes and pathogens (except sporeformers).	Milk is pasteurized by heating it to 72°C for 15 seconds. Juices are also routinely pasteurized.
Pressurized steam (autoclaving)	Typical treatment is 121°C/15 psi for 15 minutes or longer, a process that destroys endospores.	Widely used to sterilize microbiological media, laboratory glassware, surgical instruments, and other items that steam can penetrate. The canning process renders foods commercially sterile.
Dry Heat
Incineration	Burns cell components to ashes.	Flaming of wire inoculating loops. Also used to destroy medical wastes and contaminated animal carcasses.
Dry heat ovens	Destroys cell components and denatures proteins. Less efficient than moist heat, requiring longer times and higher temperatures.	Laboratory glassware is sterilized by heating at 160°C to 170°C for 2 to 3 hours. Powders, oils, and other dry materials are also sterilized in ovens.
Filtration	Filter retains microbes while letting the suspending fluid or air pass through small holes.
Filtration of fluids	Various pore sizes are available; 0.2 μm is commonly used to remove bacteria.	Used for beer and wine, and to sterilize some heat-sensitive medications.
Filtration of air	HEPA filters are used to remove microbes that have a diameter of 0.3 μm or greater.	Used in biological safety cabinets, specialized hospital rooms, and airplanes. Also used in some vacuum cleaners and home air purification units.
Radiation	Type of cell damage depends on the wavelength of the radiation.
Ionizing radiation	Destroys DNA and possibly damages cytoplasmic membranes. Produces reactive molecules that damage other cell components. Items can be sterilized even after packaging.	Used to sterilize heat-sensitive materials including medical equipment, disposable surgical supplies, and drugs such as penicillin. Also used to destroy microbes in spices, herbs, and approved types of produce and meats.
Ultraviolet radiation	Damages DNA. Penetrates poorly.	Used to destroy microbes in the air and drinking water, and to disinfect surfaces.
High Pressure	Treatments of 130,000 psi are thought to denature proteins and alter the permeability of the cell. Products retain color and flavor.	Used to extend the shelf life of certain commercial food products such as guacamole.

Quizlet Chapter 5 Microbiology:

Vignettes in Patient Safety Stanislaw P. Stawicki, Michael S. Firstenberg, 2019-09-18 Medical errors contribute significantly to morbidity and mortality across our healthcare institutions. Due to the increasing complexity of the modern medical practice, a perfect storm of regulatory, market, social, and technical factors and other competing priorities created an environment that is primed for patient safety lapses. The spectrum of contributing variables ranging from minor errors that subsequently escalate poor communication and protocol process non-compliance just to name a few is extensive and solutions are only recently being described. As such, there is a growing body of research and experiences that can help provide an organized framework based on best practices and evidence-based medical principles for healthcare organizations to develop, implement, and embrace. Based on the tremendous interest in the initial three volumes of our Vignettes in Patient Safety series, this fourth volume follows a similar model of outlining a patient safety case based on experiences that many clinicians can relate to and then discusses various factors that may have contributed to a medical error, complication, and/or poor outcome. Building on a problem-based clinical vignette, each chapter then outlines an evidence-based approach to present any related literature, pertinent evidence, and potential contributing factors and solutions to common patient safety occurrences. By focusing on some of the best practices, structured experiences, and objective approaches to medical error genesis, the authors and editors hopefully can lend some insights into how we can make healthcare encounters for all patients across all settings better and safer.
