Gaston,2010-10-30 Breeding along the northern Pacific coast from British Columbia to Japan this little known bird dwelt in relative obscurity until it became the focus of a conservation debate which has resulted in a new National Park in the Queen Charlotte Islands where half the world's population breeds It made the headlines again when a lost lone bird suddenly appeared at Lundy Island in the Bristol Channel England in May 1990 and again in April 1991 The Ancient Murrelet and its three congeners are unique amongst seabirds in that their young are entirely precocial leaving the nest as soon as they hatch to grow up at sea Tony Gaston has carried out the only detailed study of the bird in the fine mature coastal forests of the Queen Charlotte Islands His work has revealed their complex social behaviour the song behaviour of the males and the species response to the variety of predators which they face from Peregrines to Deer Mice His story is set against a survey of the species worldwide and the grandeur of the northwest Pacific coast The illustrations of Ian Jones who also assisted with the research capture the bird and its environment beautifully Coloniality in the Cliff Swallow Charles R. Brown,Mary Bomberger Brown,1996-07 Many animal species live and breed in colonies Although biologists have documented numerous costs and benefits of group living such as increased competition for limited resources and more pairs of eyes to watch for predators they often still do not agree on why coloniality evolved in the first place Drawing on their twelve year study of a population of cliff swallows in Nebraska the Browns investigate twenty six social and ecological costs and benefits of coloniality many never before addressed in a systematic way for any species They explore how these costs and benefits are reflected in reproductive success and survivorship and speculate on the evolution of cliff swallow coloniality This work the most comprehensive and detailed study of vertebrate coloniality to date will be of interest to all who study social animals including behavioral ecologists population biologists ornithologists and parasitologists Its focus on the evolution of coloniality will also appeal to evolutionary biologists and to psychologists studying decision making in animals The Mercantile
