Resources in Education ,1997 Learner-centered Science Education ,2019-02-11 This book arises from the author s experience of the South African science curriculum development and teaching since 1994 exploring definitions of science and approaches to science education appropriate to a newly liberated developing country Each of the 50 chapters is borne out of Cliff Malcolm s close relationships with communities in SA where he obtained deep insights into their attitudes to science teaching and learning providing him with an empirical basis to challenge tertiary institutions to transform their curriculum offerings to embrace the culture and world views of African students The author makes a compelling case for the evolution of relevant science teaching and learning that provide capital for indigenous knowledges The book has relevance also to first world countries because the social and educational problems facing South Africa though starker here are present in all countries The book addresses among others the nature of scientific knowledge and knowledge production how scientific knowledge can be accessed and represented what counts as legitimate scientific knowledge in the South African context of colonization liberation inequity and African belief systems The book extends the debates on African Science and offers ways of talking and writing about science that reframe it acknowledging problematics and pluralism offering ways of bringing Western and African thought together Using a richly descriptive novelistic style the author sketches vivid portraits of his research sites participants and experiences His vignettes are embedded in deep theoretical insights lending gravity to the development discourse in science education providing a coherent language for the transformational agendas of science educators committed to the project of social justice through a relevant science

Biological Invasions in South Africa Brian W. van Wilgen, John Measey, David M. Richardson, John R. Wilson, Tsungai A. Zengeya, 2020-03-10 This open access volume presents a comprehensive account of all aspects of biological invasions in South Africa where research has been conducted over more than three decades and where bold initiatives have been implemented in attempts to control invasions and to reduce their ecological economic and social effects It covers a broad range of themes including history policy development and implementation the status of invasions of animals and plants in terrestrial marine and freshwater environments the development of a robust ecological theory around biological invasions the effectiveness of management interventions and scenarios for the future The South African situation stands out because of the remarkable diversity of the country and the wide range of problems encountered in its varied ecosystems which has resulted in a disproportionate investment into both research and management The South African experience holds many lessons for other parts of the world and this book should be of immense value to researchers students managers and policy makers who deal with biological invasions and ecosystem management and conservation in most other regions
