Student Learning Objectives

1. Students will be able to demonstrate how prices are determined in competitive markets and how the market will work to eliminate shortages and surpluses.
2. Students will be able to identify how changes in demand and/or supply will cause equilibrium prices and quantities to change.
3. Students will be able to identify the causes that give rise to private markets reaching an equilibrium that is not Pareto optimal and the correct normative intervention that will move the market toward the Pareto optimum. Causes include asymmetric information and adverse selection, moral hazard, public goods, externalities, the principal/agent problem, and lack of competition.
4. Students will be able to identify the reasons why government interventions to alleviate market failure give rise to inefficiencies that move the economy away from the Pareto optimum. These inefficiencies include government administrators' lack of information regarding consumer preferences and production technologies, rent seeking by special interests, short-time horizons by politicians, a lack of competition in government.
