

How to Explain Family Science to Anyone

Create Your Family Science Elevator Pitch

When someone asks you "What is Family Science?" how can you answer effectively? Use this elevator pitch — the steps of personally introducing a concept during a short elevator ride.

Follow These Steps:

Definition: Give a basic description of Family Science. One definition is good to share. Some interesting facts or a surprising example helps.

Relevance: In 1-2 sentences, explain why this field is exciting, important and important.

Examples: Give a real-life example of how Family Science understanding would be helpful in practice. Use your words to summarize your audience's world without.

Research: Address how this discipline supports your research (connect with your audience's interests, knowledge about other topics or a relevant system).

Address: Address one research question you address using Family Science methods. You could address why it's important to focus specifically on families.

What Can This Elevator Pitch Accomplish?

If you spend 30 seconds or less, you can share that F.S. does address description and understanding.

What are the outcomes?

• Connect for your next pitch, or
• Find the right person to share

Family Science is...
the scientific study of families.
It's the science of family relationships.

Family Science Focus Should Be...

- Family for professionals
- Research in the practice of family science
- Community
- Understanding & improving family life
- Research in family science

Tips for a Successful Pitch

- Focus on what matters. You can share as much as you want.
- Share what you know. Family and community science are important to practice.
- Adapt to the person's interest. If you have a lot of time, you can share a lot of information. If you have a short time, you can share a lot of information.
- Don't worry about perfect. It's about the idea.
- Practice. It's about a good speaking style.
