Impacts of Paved Roads National Research Council, Transportation Research Board, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board development from construction and use by vehicles to maintenance affect physical and chemical soil conditions water flow and air and water quality as well as plants and animals Roads and traffic can alter wildlife habitat cause vehicle related mortality impede animal migration and disperse nonnative pest species of plants and animals Integrating environmental considerations into all phases of transportation is an important evolving process The increasing awareness of environmental issues has made road development more complex and controversial Over the past two decades the Federal Highway Administration and state transportation agencies have increasingly recognized the importance of the effects of transportation on the natural environment This report provides guidance on ways to reconcile the different goals of road development and environmental conservation It identifies the ecological effects of roads that can be evaluated in the planning design construction and maintenance of roads and offers several recommendations to help better understand and manage ecological impacts of paved roads Environmental Geology Klaus Knödel, Gerhard Lange, Hans-Jürgen Voigt, 2007-12-31 This illustrated handbook describes a broad spectrum of methods in the fields of remote sensing geophysics geology hydrogeology geochemistry and microbiology designed to investigate landfill mining and industrial sites The descriptions provide information about the principle of the methods applications and fundamentals This handbook also deals with the stepwise procedure for investigating sites and common problems faced in efficient implementation of field operations
