ing else. She tried the public library, both branches, found a few more photography books and several articles on microfiche, but they weren't cooling news. What was the connection between Pauline Hawthorne and Mia? Perhaps Mia had simply been a model, like she said; maybe she'd just happened to sit for Pauline Hawthorne. This did not satisfy Izzy, who felt this was an improbable coincidence.

At last she turned to the only source she could think of: her mother. Her mother was a journalist, at least in name. True, her mother mostly covered small stories, but journalists found things out. They had connections.
They had ways of researching that weren't accessible to just anyone. From her childhood, Izzy had been fiercely, stubbornly independent; she resisted to ask for help with anything. Only the deep hunger to unravel the mysterious photograph could have convinced her to approach her mother.

Richardson listened, as usual with Izzy, with only half her attention. A pressing deadline was looming, for a story on the Nature Center's fund-raising sale.

wild horse. Mrs. Richardson had wanted to be a wife, long before the aptitude tests their guidance entered in high school. "Journalists," she explained in dream careers, "chronicle our everyday lives. They insure that the public deserves to know, and they insure, so that future generations can learn from our mistakes and our achievements." For as long as she knew, her mother had always been busy with some commission or another, fighting for more school funding, more equity, more money for her young daughter along. "Change doesn't just come, it has to be fought for," her mother had always said, echoing the Shaker motto. "It's a hard lesson, when young Elena had learned the lesson, she understood it at once. Journalism, to Mrs. Ric-ardson, was a noble calling, one where you could do good and in her mind she envisioned a mix of Nellie
