Vass

Jr, James Vass Jr, 2003-05-13 This book is a study of UW men's basketball fans during the 2001-2002 season and explores their proclivity to cheering for self during basketball events. The term basketball event is used rather than basketball game to make clear that everything connected to and seen, heard or experienced before, during and after a basketball game is included. The actual game itself is only part of the basketball event. An undercurrent runs throughout this participant observation mini ethnography dealing with access and the relative quality of that access to basketball events being affected by one's age, class, race and gender. The prominent role of advertising in shaping basketball events and helping to construct fans as consumers of products both commercial and institutional during the process of cheering for self is central to this idea. Cheering for self is the activity engaged in by individual fans after they find things to identify or connect with through personal investment. Fans cheer for self indirectly. Fans cheer for the team that they identify with. Through the process of cheering for self while attending the basketball event, people are taught how to become fans, to consume a UW product, the basketball event and to consume advertisers' products. People have a tendency to spend their entire life trying to impress others.

Make the Night Hideous Pauline Greenhill, 2010-01-01 The charivari is a loud late night surprise house visiting custom from members of a community usually to a newlywed couple accompanied by a quite a request for a treat or money in exchange for the noisy performance and/or pranks. Up to the first decades of the twentieth century charivaris were for the most part enacted to express disapproval of the relationship that was their focus such as those between individuals of different ages, races or religions. While later charivaris maintained the same rituals, their meaning changed to a welcoming of the marriage. Make the Night Hideous explores this mysterious transformation using four detailed case studies from different time periods and locations across English Canada as well as first person accounts of more recent charivari participants. Pauline Greenhill's unique and fascinating work explores the malleability of a tradition, its continuing value and its contestation in a variety of discourses.

Sullivan,2005-01-01 What is the role of feelings in the euthanasia debate This is the central question in William F Sullivan s unique philosophical and ethical exploration of the issue Eye of the Heart Employing the principles and techniques of the great Canadian theologian and thinker Bernard Lonergan Sullivan offers a concrete examination of the role of feelings in grasping moral values and the key role that feelings play in ethical decision making The heart has its reasons he argues convincingly and it is a type of reason that bioethicists philosophers and legal scholars all need to know Sullivan draws on his experiences as a practicing physician to analyse the distinguishing elements of human knowing illustrating them through common examples of decision making in health care He highlights the occurrence of various types of insight particularly deliberative insights that occur in the process of making value judgments These deliberative insights are affective and through them a person apprehends moral values Eye of the Heart proposes that feelings are relevant to knowing moral values and orient us towards moral self transcendence The implications of this stance in ethics are drawn out for the euthanasia debate United States Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Motion Pictures and Filmstrips: Education Section 1958, Selected and Available for Use Abroad United States Information Agency,1959
