Sensory System Mitchell High School:

Sensory Systems of Animals Mark Hollins, 2024-10-10 Perception in animals is a fascinating and challenging subject that calls to students from many disciplines The aim of this book is to provide a knowledge base and unifying perspective on the field that will enable beginning researchers to chart their own course within it The author describes in a systematic but engaging way the sensory systems of humans and other vertebrates as well as arthropods and molluscs Why is it important to understand the senses of animals One reason is that human activities are changing the perceptual world of animals in ways that expose them to danger From bright outdoor lighting disorienting migrating birds to human sonar driving whales to beach themselves it is becoming increasingly important to find ways to reduce such dangers This will require big changes in human behavior and greater understanding of how animals react physiologically and behaviorally to anthropogenic changes in their environment The emphasis throughout is on research in both the behavioral ethological and neuroscientific traditions that has led to important discoveries The functional anatomy of each system from receptor cells to brain areas is succinctly described explaining how it underlies the animal s sensory abilities and behavior Overall descriptions of a sense for a class of animals for example hearing in arachnids are interspersed with expanded coverage of that sense in a particular animal such as the ogre faced web casting spider that does a backflip to capture an insect buzzing overhead Evolutionary themes are found throughout the book for example in describing the development of the vertebrate ear and in the convergent evolution of the eyes of vertebrates and cephalopods With over 500 references and 80 illustrations this textbook is primary reading intended for advanced undergraduates and beginning graduate students of veterinary science lab animal science and zoology It would also be of great interest to professionals and academics working with animals such as veterinary professionals and zookeepers

Thomas, 2012-12-06 This book is a collection of original research papers given at a symposium entitled Sensory Systems and Behavior of Aquatic Mammals hosted by the USSR Academy of Sciences The meeting was held in Moscow from 16 to 25 October 1991 and involved nearly 100 scientists from around the world The major headings of the book correspond to the session topics at the symposium This meeting was not the first dedicated to problems of sensory systems in aquatic mammals Experts in this field met several times previously to discuss important problems of sensory functions in echolocating animals symposia on biosonar systems were held in Frascati Italy in 1966 then in Jersey France in 1978 and in Helsingor Denmark in 1986 Papers presented at these meetings were published in books that advanced significantly the understanding of sensory systems Busnel and Fish 1980 Nachtigall and Moore 1988 Initially echolocating bats were the main subjects of consideration However studies on echolocating aquatic mammals whales and dolphins increased from one meeting to the next Indeed aquatic mammals are of exceptional interest for studying the adaptation of sensory functions for echolocation in specific aquatic environments As a natural consequence of these developments the 1989 symposium in Rome was devoted specifically to the sensory systems of cetaceans Thomas and Kastelein 1990 This symposium was held within the Fifth International Theriological Congress and was attended by many scientists Project and Program Management Mitchell L. biological systems and has helped researchers identify genes that regulate sleep eye degeneration and metabolic function Mexican cavefish are particularly powerful for the study of biological processes because these fish evolved independently in twenty nine caves in the Sierra de el Abra Region of Northeast Mexico These fish have dramatic adaptations to the cave environment and this can be used to identify genes involved in disease related traits This scholarly text will be of interest to researchers and students throughout diverse areas of biology and ecology It includes photographs of animals and behavior in laboratory and natural settings that will also increase interest and accessibility to non experts Includes a mixture of images and illustrations such as the geographical distribution of cave pools and the developmental biology of the nervous system Features a companion site with geographical maps Fills a notable gap in the literature on a topic of broad interest to the scientific community Presents the recent sequencing of the cavefish genome as a groundbreaking development for researchers working with diverse biological systems A Concise Guide to Program Management Mitchell L.
