How do people use natural resources in the world?

Renewable energy sources are those that can be replenished naturally. They are clean and do not pollute the environment. They are also sustainable, meaning they can be used for a long time without running out.

Non-renewable energy sources are those that cannot be replenished naturally. They are often fossil fuels, such as coal, oil, and natural gas. They are not sustainable, meaning they will run out in the future.

The world's energy needs are growing rapidly. This means that we need to find ways to meet these needs without harming the environment. Renewable energy sources are a promising solution to this problem.
