Propagation

SANITATION

To reduce the chance of fungal and bacterial infections, it is important that the propagation area is cleaned and sanitized before cuttings arrive. Weeds should be removed and algae-infected areas scrubbed and cleaned. All benches and floors should be thoroughly disinfected using a greenhouse disinfectant containing quaternary ammonium.

Make sure sanitation protocols are in place as the greenhouse is prepared to receive cuttings. Foot baths containing disinfectant should be placed at all entrance ways into the propagation area. These baths should be renewed daily with fresh disinfectant. Managers and workers should wash hands with a disinfectant or anti-bacterial soap before entering the propagation area after lunch and breaks.

UPON ARRIVAL

Make sure that the rooting media is laid out on clean benches several hours (or the day before) cuttings arrive. For direct-stick programs and those where cuttings are handled in sticking lines, make sure that all workers are present and that equipment is working correctly. Workers should be prepared for the day's shipment.

Store opened boxes at 50 °F (10 °C) for no more than 24 hours and prevent cutting dehydration during storage (ideally 90% relative humidity in coolers). Do not open up the individual bags of cuttings as this helps maintain high humidity around the cuttings.

Stick the cuttings immediately if possible. For relatively large shipments, pull out only enough cuttings for each worker to stick within an hour or so before replenishing with another fresh box of cuttings from the cooler. If cuttings can't be stored in a cooler, then try to store in the coolest area of the facility and monitor closely for humidity and cutting water loss. Some growers without cooler space also lay opened bags on propagation bench and begin misting. Do not leave opened, un-stuck cuttings on the propagation bench for more than a few hours or they can become twisted and curled.

TEMPERATURE

Warm temperatures and humid conditions are needed for successful poinsettia propagation. Bottom heat is very helpful, especially in northern areas where night temperatures are relatively cool. Try to maintain temperatures between 73–75 °F (23–24 °C) in the media until the cuttings are fully rooted. Poinsettias are propagated during the warm summer months so greenhouse day temperatures will normally be significantly higher than night temperatures and constant temperatures are more difficult to hold. If at all possible, try to avoid night temperatures below 70 °F and day temperatures above 85 °F the first two weeks of rooting.

After good root development, temperature and humidity can be reduced and the cuttings acclimated to higher light intensities. Ideal media temperatures would be between 70–72 °F (21–22 °C) with air temperatures varying based on climatic conditions. Again, try to avoid relatively low night temperatures and relatively high day temperatures as cuttings are finishing up the propagation process.

Most varieties are generally well-rooted in four weeks using these recommended temperatures.
