

CHAPTER IV FINDINGS AND DISCUSSIONS

Chapter four presents the findings and discussions of the research problems presented in chapter one. The first problem is about the main character infatuation described in Sparks' The Notebook, and the second problems are to what extent the infatuation occurs to the main character in The Notebook.

4.1. Infatuation as Described in Sparks' The Notebook

Infatuation is the state of being completely carried away by unreasoning passion or love; addictive love. Infatuation usually occurs at the beginning of the relationship when sexual attraction is central. It is also the situation of being completely lost in the emotion of unreasoning desire. The infatuation in The Notebook is described in Noah Calhoun as the main character. Noah who is an ordinary person falls in love with Allie who comes from a rich family. Although Noah comes from a poor family, his love for Allie is real. Their differentiation does not make Noah give up to make Allie love him. Allie is the one who can make Noah fall in love and feel complete. That feeling makes Noah cannot move on from Allie. Noah's desire to Allie makes him experienced infatuation which makes him depress and suffer. Therefore, Noah's infatuation can be seen from the character himself, in which it relates to the internal and external conflicts.

4.1.1 The General Description of Main Character

Character is one of the essential things in a story. It plays a big role since it is the object that plays some act and action in the story. By the existence of many kinds of characters, the story will be more interesting. The characterization of a character can be found in some ways such as the actions of the characters, the author's description about the character, dramatic statements and thoughts of other characters, the character says about other characters, and the authors speaking as a storyteller or as an observer (Robert, 2003: 68). In this subchapter, the general description of Noah
