Investment in the Future

- Do not expect that appearance of new evidence of stability in head injuries, otherwise it is expected to be de-stabilizing.
- Do not expect that the appearance of a new mechanism of injury, especially one that results in a fatality, is an indicator of safety.
- Do not assume that appearance of a new injury is an indicator of safety.
- Research has shown that a well-planned, systematic review of the literature is more likely to identify new evidence of safety than a search of the literature. This is especially true for the identification of new evidence of safety, which is often not reported in the literature.
- Do not assume that the appearance of a new injury is an indicator of safety.
- Do not assume that the appearance of a new injury is an indicator of safety.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to a control group (CON) and an exercise group (EX). The EX group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic and resistance training. The CON group remained sedentary. The EX group showed a significant increase in HR and EE compared to the CON group. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve cardiovascular fitness and increase energy expenditure in sedentary, middle-aged women.
