Andrés Solimano, founder, International Center for Globalization and Development. In 1944 the Bretton Woods Conference ushered in a new international economic order. The World Bank emerged as one of the most powerful financial institutions in the world and a new colonial authority in all but name. But how does it operate? Who funds it and what agenda does it work to promote? In The World Bank: A Critical History, Eric Toussaint answers all of these questions and more. Offering up a highly readable yet uniquely authoritative account, the book analyses the Bank from its beginnings to the present day. Chapters on gender, climate, and the pandemic era provide the reader with a truly contemporary, definitive text. Seven international case studies illustrate the impact of World Bank policy, and Toussaint also explores the political, economic, and strategic motives of the US government with regard to the World Bank. The book concludes with a proposal for replacing the World Bank, IMF, and WTO with new multilateral and democratic institutions.

Eric Toussaint is a historian and political scientist. He is spokesperson for the Committee for the Abolition of Illegitimate Debt, of which he is one of the founding members. melting glaciers and the polar ice caps Maintaining a sustainable relationship between water and development requires that current needs be balanced against the needs of future generations The development community has transformed and broadened its approach to water since the 1980s As stresses on the quality and availability of water have increased donors have begun to move toward more comprehensive approaches that seek to integrate water into development in other sectors This evaluation examines the full scope of the World Bank's lending and grant support for water activities More than 30 background papers prepared for the evaluation have analyzed Bank lending by thematic area and by activity type IDA and IBRD the Bank have supported countries in many water related sectors The evaluation by definition is retrospective but it identifies changes that will be necessary going forward including those related to strengthening institutions and increasing financial sustainability Lessons and results from nearly 2 000 loans and credits and work with 142 countries are identified

Starved for Science Robert Paarlberg, 2009-06-30 Listen to a short interview with Robert Paarlberg Host Chris Gondek Producer Heron Crane Heading upcountry in Africa to visit small farms is absolutely exhilarating given the dramatic beauty of big skies red soil and arid vistas but eventually the two lane tarmac narrows to rutted dirt and the journey must continue on foot The farmers you eventually meet are mostly women hardworking but visibly poor They have no improved seeds no chemical fertilizers no irrigation and with their meager crops they earn less than a dollar a day Many are malnourished Nearly two thirds of Africans are employed in agriculture yet on a per capita basis they produce roughly 20 percent less than they did in 1970 Although modern agricultural science was the key to reducing rural poverty in Asia modern farm science including biotechnology has recently been kept out of Africa In Starved for Science Robert Paarlberg explains why poor African farmers are denied access to productive technologies particularly genetically engineered seeds with improved resistance to insects and drought He traces this obstacle to the current opposition to farm science in prosperous countries Having embraced agricultural science to become well fed themselves those in wealthy countries are now instructing Africans on the most dubious grounds not to do the same In a book sure to generate intense debate Paarlberg details how this cultural turn against agricultural science among affluent societies is now being exported inappropriately to Africa Those who are opposed to the use of agricultural technologies are telling African farmers that in effect it would be just as well for them to remain poor
