The Colonial Past in History Textbooks Karel Van Nieuwenhuyse, Joaquim Pires Valentim, 2018-05-01 This book examines the evolving representations of the colonial past from the mid 19th century up to decolonization in the 1960s and 70s the so called era of Modern Imperialism in post war history textbooks from across the world The aim of the book is to examine the evolving outlook of colonial representations in history education and the underpinning explanations for the specific outlook in different former colonizer and colonized countries to be found in collective memory popular historical culture social representations identity building processes and the state of historical knowledge within academia

The approach of the book is novel and innovative in different ways. First of all, given the complexity of the research, an original interdisciplinary approach has been implemented which brings together historians, history educators, and social psychologists to examine representations of colonialism in history education in different countries around the world while drawing on different theoretical frameworks. Secondly, given the interest in the interplay between collective memory, popular historical culture, social representations, and the state of historical knowledge within academia, a diachronic approach is implemented, examining the evolving representations of the colonial past and connecting them to developments within society at large and academia. This will allow for a deeper understanding of the processes under examination. Thirdly, studies from various corners of the world are included in the book. More specifically, the project includes research from three categories of countries: former colonizer countries including England, Spain, Italy, France, Portugal, and Belgium; countries having been both colonized and colonizer, Chile; and former colonized countries including Zimbabwe, Malta, and Mozambique. This selection allows pairing up the countries under review as former colonizing/colonized ones, for instance, Portugal/Mozambique, United Kingdom/Malta, allowing for an in-depth comparison between the countries involved. Before reaching the research core, three introductory chapters outline three general issues. The book starts with addressing the different approaches and epistemological underpinnings of history and social psychology as academic disciplines hold. In a second chapter, evolutions within international academic colonial historiography are analyzed with a special focus on the recent development of New Imperial History. A third chapter analyses history textbooks as cultural tools and political means of transmitting historical knowledge and representations across generations. The next ten chapters form the core of the book in which evolving representations of colonial history from mid-19th century until decolonization in the 1960s and 1970s are examined, explained, and reflected upon for the above-mentioned countries. This is done through a history textbook analysis in a diachronic perspective. For some countries, the analysis dates back to textbooks published after the Second World War; for other countries, the focus will be more limited in time. The research presented is done by historians and history educators as well as by social psychologists. In a concluding chapter, an overall overview is presented in which similarities and differences throughout the case studies are identified, interpreted, and reflected upon.

Bulletin, 1934 Bulletin - Bureau of Education United States. Bureau of Education, 1934 The Patchwork of World History in Texas High Schools Stephen Jackson, 2022-11-30. This book traces the historical development of the World History course as it has been taught in high school classrooms in Texas, a populous and nationally influential state over the last hundred years. Arguing that the course is a result of a patchwork of competing groups and ideas that have intersected over the past century with each new framework patched over but never completely erased or replaced, the author crucially examines themes of imperialism, Eurocentrism, and nationalism in both textbooks and the curriculum more broadly. The first part of the book presents an overview of the World History course supported by numerical analysis of textbook content and public documents, while the second focuses on the depiction of non-Western peoples and persistent narratives of Eurocentrism and nationalism. It ultimately offers that a more global, accurate and balanced curriculum is possible despite the tension between the ideas of professional world historians who often de-center the nation-state in their quest for a truly global approach to the subject and the historical core rationale of state-sponsored education in the United States to produce loyal citizens. Offering a new conceptual understanding of how colonial themes in World History curriculum have been dealt with in the past and are now engaged with in contemporary times, it provides essential context for scholars and educators with interests in the history of education, curriculum studies and the teaching of World History in the United States.

Textbooks in American Society Philip G. Altbach, Gail P. Kelly, Hugh G. Petrie, Lois Weis, 1991-09-27. In recent years, textbooks have been widely criticized for low standards, lack of imaginativeness and insensitivity to racial and gender issues. Increasingly, they are cited as another weak link in American public education. This book goes beyond the headlines to examine how textbooks are produced, how they are selected, and what pressures are placed on textbook authors and publishers. The book focuses on the relationship of the textbook to the educational system and includes important issues such as the politics of textbook policy, the determinants of textbook content, the role of textbooks in educational reform, and the process of selection at the state level. The authors offer current research on textbook policy, including perspectives from those directly involved with textbooks from several thoughtful analyses by textbook editors and publishers to the views of California's Superintendent of Public Instruction.
