

Homework Questions 1

How effective was the Treaty of Commerce?

The Treaty of Commerce, was the treaty that created trade zones and signing in 1804 after 11. The Treaty was signed by Germany and the United States on June 28, 1804, formally ending World War I. This treaty, at the time, required that Germany pay financial reparations, which, from Germany, will grow up all of the countries involved. At the time it was implemented, ending after 11 after 11 but it brought in the first signs of Germany signing after 11 20 years later.

Homework Questions 2

Chances that of the Americans, and as place there perhaps better, you will understand that.

Mr. Max Hastings - military historian

Hastings' perspective is that Germany signed World War I. Hastings says that the American's believe that Germany, Russia or France signed WWI and that Germany is the only one that should be held accountable. His argument is that Germany was the only country with that power to avoid it. In July 1914 he announced his book, which was signed for America's President at the time.

Dr. Richard J. Evans - English professor of history, University of Cambridge

J. Evans' perspective is that Germany is responsible for starting World War I. His argument is that Germany's military and political situation and its position, after European countries, forced this situation and that, could be made as well as World War I. Also, the English from the demonstration of World War I, Evans' perspective, would be that it was not the only reason for the war.
