Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of middle-aged men. The study was conducted in a community-based setting. The participants were 40 middle-aged men (mean age 45.5 years) who were divided into two groups: a control group (n=20) and an intervention group (n=20). The intervention group participated in a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not participate in any training program. The physical fitness and health of the participants were assessed at baseline and at the end of the 12-week training program. The results showed that the intervention group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and health compared to the control group at the end of the 12-week training program. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness and health of middle-aged men.
