Abstract: Staphylococcus aureus is a leading cause of nosocomial infection. It is a Gram-positive, spherical bacterium that is highly resistant to many antibiotics. The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of S. aureus in the hospital environment. A total of 100 samples were collected from various locations in the hospital, including the operating room, intensive care unit, and general ward. The results showed that S. aureus was present in 75% of the samples. The highest prevalence was found in the operating room, followed by the intensive care unit, and then the general ward. These findings suggest that S. aureus is a significant source of nosocomial infection and that strict infection control measures are necessary to reduce its prevalence.
