

Barter - goods and services were traded without the exchange of money.

However, before trade could occur, there had to be a "double coincidence of wants". Each trader had to have something the other wanted.

I'll trade you a chicken for a pair of shoes.

I would love to sell you these shoes but I can't eat chicken, due to my bad teeth, caused by smoking.

In a barter economy a chicken farmer who wants to buy shoes may have to first trade chickens for apples and then apples for shoes because the guy selling shoes wants only apples. Money eliminates this problem.
