The information is separated into three main parts: a biographical section which gives a sense of the life and world of twelve major theatre orchestrators as well as incorporating briefer sections on another thirty arrangers and conductors; a lively discussion of the art of orchestration written for musical theatre enthusiasts including those who do not read music; a biographical section which gives a sense of the life and world of twelve major theatre orchestrators as well as incorporating briefer sections on another thirty arrangers and conductors; and an impressive show by show listing of more than seven hundred musicals in many cases including a song by song listing of precisely who orchestrated what along with relevant comments from people involved with the productions.
