One-on-One Tutoring by Humans and Computers articulates the CIRCSIM Tutor project, an attempt to develop a computer tutor that generates a natural language dialogue with a student. Editors Martha Evens and Joel Michael present the educational context within which the project was launched, as well as research into tutoring, the process of implementation of CIRCSIM Tutor and the results of using CIRCSIM Tutor in the classroom The domain of this project is cardiovascular physiology specifically targeting first year medical students though the idea is applicable to the development of intelligent tutoring systems across populations disciplines and domains This 5 year long project was motivated by the belief that students need assistance in building appropriate mental models of complex physiological phenomena as well as practice in expressing these ideas in their own words to fully develop those models and experience in problem solving to use those models effectively The book outlines directions for future research and includes distinct features such as detailed studies of human one on one tutoring learning outcomes resulting from use of the tutor natural language input parsed and translated into logical form and natural language output generated using the LFG paradigm This volume will appeal to educators who want to improve human tutoring or use computer tutors in the classroom and it will interest computer scientists who want to build those computer tutors as well as anyone who believes that language is central to teaching and learning
