

Answer: The defendant's innocent knowledge.

Question: Was the defendant negligent for spreading the net? Was anything further done to support your answers about negligence?

1. Defendant's knowledge about the net's condition at the time it was spread? (Should not be spread if net is defective) (Should you have known it?)	I don't remember with either of us the danger because they both usually participate in the fishing activities and they think that they know what they are doing and they know the limits of their ability and therefore they participate in fishing. They're both usually around each other however at the same time I remember that we were fishing and I thought that they were participating and they had nothing to do with it.
2. Defendant's knowledge about the net's condition? (Should you have known it?) (Should you have known it?)	A: Yes, the defendant's knowledge about the net's condition is the subject of the case. According to the law, the defendant should have known the net's condition because he was present at the time it was spread. B: I don't know if the defendant's knowledge about the net's condition is the subject of the case. I don't know if the defendant's knowledge about the net's condition is the subject of the case.
3. Should the defendant be liable for the net's condition? (Should you have known it?) (Should you have known it?)	Yes, the defendant is liable for the net's condition because according to the law, the defendant is liable for the net's condition. The defendant is liable for the net's condition because he was present at the time it was spread and he should have known the net's condition. I don't know if the defendant's knowledge about the net's condition is the subject of the case. I don't know if the defendant's knowledge about the net's condition is the subject of the case.
4. Should the defendant be liable for the net's condition? (Should you have known it?) (Should you have known it?)	Yes, the defendant is liable for the net's condition because he was present at the time it was spread and he should have known the net's condition. I don't know if the defendant's knowledge about the net's condition is the subject of the case. I don't know if the defendant's knowledge about the net's condition is the subject of the case.
