Osmosis & Diffusion

Cell Membrane

Each animal cell has a cell membrane that controls what goes in and out of the cell. It is made of phospholipids and proteins. The cell membrane is made of a phospholipid bilayer. Each phospholipid has a hydrophilic head and a hydrophobic tail. The hydrophilic heads face outwards and the hydrophobic tails face inwards. The cell membrane is made of a phospholipid bilayer. Each phospholipid has a hydrophilic head and a hydrophobic tail. The hydrophilic heads face outwards and the hydrophobic tails face inwards.

Diffusion

Small molecules move across cell membranes through a natural ability called diffusion. Diffusion happens by which a substance moves from a place of high concentration to a place of low concentration. This process continues until the concentration of the substance is the same on both sides of the membrane.

Osmosis

Osmosis is the diffusion of water across a selectively permeable membrane. The movement of water from one side of a membrane to the other.

Active transport: This is the movement of a substance from a low concentration to a high concentration through a cell membrane. The movement of a substance through a cell membrane using energy is called active transport.

Passive transport: The movement of a substance across a cell membrane from a high concentration to a low concentration without the use of energy is called passive transport.
