Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during maximal exercise at the beginning and end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in HR and HRR at rest and during maximal exercise compared to the control group. The control group had no significant change in HR and HRR. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial or non-natural light sources. Likewise, there are also long periods of complete darkness in the case of the forest.
- Several measures therefore will come with the use of the standard time specifications, the length of the day and night being determined by the local country regulations.
- The end of the night is determined by the way that the period of darkness is defined. In practice, this is the end of the night, but it is also possible that there is a short, bright, day-like period in the middle of the night.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will want to produce more of the output, and if the price falls, the producer will want to produce less of the output.
