s eldest sister Dorothy and the Wizard in Oz L. Frank Baum, 2014-07-28 THE train from Frisco was very late It should have arrived at Hugson s siding at midnight but it was already five o clock and the gray dawn was breaking in the east when the little train slowly rumbled up to the open shed that served for the station house As it came to a stop the conductor called out in a loud voice Hugson s Siding At once a little girl rose from her seat and walked to the door of the car carrying a wicker suit case in one hand and a round bird cage covered up with newspapers in the other while a parasol was tucked under her arm The conductor helped her off the car and then the engineer started his train again so that it puffed and groaned and moved slowly away up the track The reason he was so late was because all through the night there were times when the solid earth shook and trembled under him and the engineer was afraid that at any moment the rails might spread apart and an accident happen to his passengers So he moved the cars slowly and with caution The little girl stood still to watch until the train had disappeared around a curve then she turned to see where she was The shed at Hugson s Siding was bare save for an old wooden bench and did not look very inviting As she peered through the soft gray light not a house of any sort was visible near the station nor was any person in sight but after a while the child discovered a horse and buggy standing near a group of trees a short distance away She walked toward it and found the horse tied to a tree and standing motionless with its head hanging down almost to the ground It was a big horse tall and bony with long legs and large knees and feet She could count his ribs easily where they showed through the skin of his body and his head was long and seemed altogether too big for him as if it did not fit His tail was short and scraggly and his harness had been broken in many places and fastened together again with cords and bits of wire The buggy seemed almost new for it had a shiny top and side curtains Getting around in front so that she could look inside the girl saw a boy curled up on the seat fast asleep
