

Error Message Explained: User Profile Service Failed the Logon

This article is part of Helge's Profile Toolkit (<https://helgeklein.com/blog/2011/05/helges-profile-toolkit/>), a set of posts explaining the knowledge and tools required to tame Windows user profiles.

Many errors related to user profiles result in the user getting a temporary profile instead of the regular local or roaming profile. I have written about possible causes for that here (<https://helgeklein.com/blog/2011/11/temporary-user-profiles/>). In addition to that there is an entirely different category of errors which occur when even a temporary profile cannot be created. This article describes likely causes.

User Profile Service Failed the Logon

When Windows cannot even create a temporary profile you get to see the following error message:

The User Profile Service failed the logon. User profile cannot be loaded.

This typically happens when the default profile, stored in `C:\Users\Default`, has incorrect permissions or is corrupt in some way.
