

23.8 DEVELOPMENT OF THE RESPIRATORY SYSTEM 957

At about 4 weeks of development, the respiratory system begins as an outgrowth of the foregut (precursor of some digestive organs) just anterior to the pharynx. This outgrowth is called the respiratory diverticulum (di-ver-TIK-ū-lum) or lung bud (Figure 23.28). The endoderm lining the respiratory diverticulum gives rise to the epithelium and glands of the trachea, bronchi, and alveoli. Mesoderm surrounding the respiratory diverticulum gives rise to the connective tissue, cartilage, and smooth muscle of these structures.

? When does the respiratory system begin to develop in an embryo?

The epithelial lining of the larynx develops from the endoderm of the respiratory diverticulum; the cartilages and muscles originate from the fourth and sixth pharyngeal arches, swellings on the surface of the embryo.

As the respiratory diverticulum elongates, its distal end enlarges to form a globular tracheal bud, which gives rise to the trachea. Soon after, the tracheal bud divides into bronchial buds, which branch repeatedly and develop with the bronchi. By 24 weeks, 17 orders of branches have formed and respiratory bronchioles have developed.

During weeks 6 to 16, all major elements of the lungs have formed, except for those involved in gaseous exchange (respiratory bronchioles, alveolar ducts, and alveoli). Since respiration is not possible at this stage, fetuses born during this time cannot survive.

During weeks 16 to 26, lung tissue becomes highly vascular and respiratory bronchioles, alveolar ducts, and some primitive alveoli develop. Although it is possible for a fetus born near the end of this period to survive if given intensive care, death frequently occurs due to the immaturity of the respiratory and other systems.

From 26 weeks to birth, many more primitive alveoli develop; they consist of type I alveolar cells (main sites of gaseous exchange) and type II surfactant-producing cells. Blood capillaries also establish close contact with the primitive alveoli. Recall that surfactant is necessary to lower surface tension of alveolar fluid and thus reduce the tendency of alveoli to collapse on exhalation. Although surfactant production begins by 20 weeks, it is present in only small quantities. Amounts sufficient to permit survival of a premature (preterm) infant are not produced until 26 to 28 weeks' gestation. Infants born before 26 to 28 weeks are at high risk of respiratory distress syndrome (RDS), in which the alveoli collapse during exhalation and must be reinflated during inhalation (see Clinical Connection: Respiratory Distress Syndrome in Section 23.2).

At about 30 weeks, mature alveoli develop. However, it is estimated that only about one-sixth of the full complement of alveoli develop before birth; the remainder develop after birth during the first 8 years.

As the lungs develop, they acquire their pleural sacs. The visceral pleura and the parietal pleura develop from mesoderm. The space between the pleural layers is the pleural cavity.

During development, breathing movements of the fetus cause the aspiration of fluid into the lungs. This fluid is a mixture of amniotic fluid, mucus from bronchial glands, and surfactant. At birth, the lungs are about half-filled with fluid. When breathing begins at birth, most of the fluid is rapidly reabsorbed by blood and lymph capillaries and a small amount is expelled through the nose and mouth during delivery.
