Response To Disaster Fact Versus Fiction And Its Perpetuation:

Response to Disaster Henry W. Fischer, 1998 A third generation disaster researcher challenges what he sees as a myth perpetrated since the genesis of the field in the 1950s that faced with an emergency most people will panic and flee become helplessly impassive or loot He sets out the empirical evidence in statistics and case studies He agrees with colleagues that the mass media are a primary factor in spreading the myth but goes beyond them to address what emergency agencies can do despite it Graduate and undergraduate students interested in social response to disasters the disaster research community and people responsible for responding to disaster might find the treatment interesting Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR

Response to Disaster Henry W. Fischer III, 1994-07-12 This book provides the reader with a basic understanding of how people and organizations usually respond to a disaster in contrast to how they are usually perceived to respond The author also describes how and why the mass media helps to provide both accurate and inaccurate information If each of us were to gain a better understanding of the behavioral and organizational problems commonly encountered during a disaster we may facilitate more effective mitigation planning and disaster response activity in our own communities and in the nation Contents Foreword Preface Acknowledgements What is a Disaster Behavioral Responses to Disaster Why We Believe the Disaster Mythology Organizational Response to Disaster Future Research Needs Bibliography Index
