The Complete Travel Books of W.D. Howells (Illustrated Edition) William Dean Howells, 2017-07-04. This unique collection of William Dean Howells' complete travel books has been designed and formatted to the highest digital standards. Extract: Nothing can be fairer to the eye than these summer isles of Eden lying all about Venice, far and near. The water forever trembles and changes with every change of light from one rainbow glory to another, as with the restless hues of an opal, and even when the splendid tides recede and go down with the sea, they leave a heritage of beauty to the empurpled mud of the shallows, all strewn with green disheveled sea-weed. The lagoons have almost as wide a bound as your vision. William Dean Howells, 1837-1920 was an American realist author, literary critic, and playwright. Nicknamed 'The Dean of American Letters', he was particularly known for his tenure as editor of the Atlantic Monthly, as well as his own prolific writings, including the Christmas story 'Christmas Every Day' and the novels The Rise of Silas Lapham and A Traveler from Altruria. Howells is known to be the father of American realism and a denouncer of the sentimental novel. He was the first American author to bring a realist aesthetic to the literature of the United States. His stories of Boston upper-crust life set in the 1850s are highly regarded among scholars of American fiction. After a short campaign in Republican administration, Howells was appointed a consul in Venice in 1861. He remained in Italy for 4 years, and during this time he wrote travel sketches and reports describing life in town and country. Later on, he came back to Europe, which resulted in few more travel books to his name. Table of Contents: Venetian Life, Italian Journeys, Roman Holidays and Others, Suburban Sketches, Familiar Spanish Travels, A Little Swiss Sojourn, London Films, Seven English Cities.

International Sharing of Scientific Data: A Focus on Developing Countries,2013-01-11 The theme of this international symposium is the promotion of greater sharing of scientific data for the benefit of research and broader development particularly in the developing world This is an extraordinarily important topic Indeed I have devoted much of my own career to matters related to the concept of openness I had the opportunity to promote and help build the open courseware program at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology MIT This program has made the teaching materials for all 2 000 subjects taught at MIT available on the Web for anyone anywhere to use anytime at no cost In countries where basic broadband was not available we shipped it in on hard drives and compact disks Its impact has been worldwide but it has surely had the greatest impact on the developing world I am also a trustee of a nonprofit organization named Ithaca that operates Journal Storage JSTOR and other entities that make scholarly information available at very low cost The culture of science has been international and open for centuries Indeed the scientific enterprise can only work when all information is open and accessible because science works through critical analysis and replication of results In recent years as some scientific data and especially technological data have increased in economic value frequently has caused us to be far less open with information than business and free enterprise require us to be Indeed the worldwide shift to what is known as open innovation is strengthening every day Finally since the end of World War II the realities of modern military conflict and now terrorism have led governments to restrict information through classification This is important but I believe that we classify far too much information The last thing we need today at the beginning of the twenty first century is further arbitrary limitations on the free flow of scientific information whether by policies established by governments and businesses or by lack of information infrastructure For all these reasons the international sharing of scientific data is one of the topics of great interest here at the National Academies and has been the subject of many of our past reports This is the primary reason why this symposium has been co organized by the NRC s Policy and Global Affairs Division the Board on International Scientific Organizations BISO and the Board on Research Data and Information BRDI
