Kith and Kin and the Lived Experience of Persons with Intellectual Disabilities Anne-Marie Callus,2025-09-18

This book considers the ways in which the lives of persons with intellectual disability are closely interconnected with those of the persons around them The ways in which these interconnections work and the effects they have are examined by taking a very close look at specific instances in the lives of persons with intellectual disability taken from published research and other sources and covering various life domains including education employment creative work socialising and family life The fourteen case study chapters covering Australia France Ireland Italy Malta Spain the UK and the USA focus on the interactions between the person with intellectual disability concerned and other persons The analyses use Paul Ricoeur s concept of the interrelational self to show how the lives and selves of persons with intellectual disability are intimately intertwined with those of the persons who come into contact with them Furthermore it is argued that what we learn about the deep connections between persons with intellectual disability and those who play a significant role in their lives can be applied to general human experience What happens in each one to one interaction is of paramount importance The analyses are based on Max Van Manen s phenomenological research approach and critical phenomenology The innovative approach thus created provides fresh insights and a different method for carrying out research and analysis in the area The short format of the chapters in the main part of the book makes it suitable for use on a wide range of courses in disability studies as well as in other disciplines and areas of study such as psychology education legal studies and childhood studies among others It also makes it accessible for advocates and practitioners working with persons with intellectual disability

Affective Movements, Methods and Pedagogies Anne Harris, Stacy Holman Jones,2020-12-09 Affective Movements

Methods and Pedagogies invites readers to think with affect about performance pedagogies and their inherent activist embodied and collective natures It works across multiple spheres to help readers understand how to deploy affective approaches rather than to simply think with affect theory about traditional methods The book is structured and curated across three main thematic sections affective movements methods and pedagogies each of which treats the core explorations of affect and performance through a different perspective It is concerned with the ways performance and theatrical methods work with and through a theoretics of affect The sixteen chapters include work that models theoretical practices in writing and demonstrates how theorising affect and its methods is itself a performative practice The contributors offer rich examples from diverse geopolitical as well as disciplinary contexts innovative methods and finally intersectional theoretics This collection will be of interest to higher education students exploring methodologies and academic researchers and teachers in
