

Strategic Risk Management Essay

‘The purpose of strategic risk management is to develop a holistic approach to managing risk within an organisation.’ Discuss

It is becoming more difficult for businesses of all sizes to keep up with ever-changing market conditions while maintaining their current business and operational practices (Slywotzky and Drzik, 2005). One of the most challenging aspects of leadership is being able to adapt the company's response to different situations, which is greatly exacerbated by an ever-changing risk environment (Andersen, 2015). Though it seems that most successful firms have a common trait, they are ready to tackle those strategic problems and handle the developing risks and threats in ways that present practical alternatives. Throughout the discussion of this topic, a strong analysis will be conducted which will include the factors which may influence the effective implementation of strategic risk management. This concise analysis of theory will not only challenge but extend our existing knowledge within the limits of our critically bound assumptions of the purpose of strategic risk management. Examples are provided that link theory with practice.

The formulation and execution of an organization's strategy are affected by strategic risk. When designing the first plan, an example of a risk is a miscalculation of market developments in the future. Risks affecting the organization's long-term success are included in the category of strategic risk. There are several factors to consider, such as the market, governance, and stakeholders, that all play a role in this process (Roberts et al, 2003). The Economist Intelligence Unit (2010) explain that ‘Strategic risks are those that pose a threat to a company's ability to set and execute its overall strategy.’ Frigo and Andersen (2009) add that a strategic risk assessment is a methodical and ongoing procedure for identifying and evaluating the most serious threats to a business. For executive management, an early appraisal is a worthwhile endeavour. A significant board role is to ensure that management's risk management methods are acceptable and to comprehend an organization's plans and the related risks. This view is almost universal in leading theory in relation to board duties. Nutt and Wilson (2010) believe that Strategic choices are made at the highest levels of management. This method tactically fits with the tasks generally assigned to the senior management and the board of directors. The risk connected with elements that are considered strategic by the firm is referred to as strategic risk.
