- (1) Use the oscilloscope to capture the specified compensation wave.
- (2) The RTD input, used mainly with low resistance and having no resistance differences among the 2 leads.
- (3) Connect input power using wires from instrument power, monitor equipment power and load lines to avoid noise induction.
- (4) Connect the instrument wiring to an end not to be influenced by noise from the electric equipment (power). If the instrument wire is affected by external noise, an active filter should be used.
- (5) Observe the distance between input and power supply wire cables. The distance between the power supply and the signal wire must be sufficient for noise reduction.
- (6) Install the noise filter on the power which is always grounded and disconnect the wiring distance between the noise filter and the instrument and power terminals.
- (7) Do not install noise sensor devices on the filter output signal since this may lessen filter effect.
- (8) The power supply wires, used twisted wires with low voltage drop.
