Question: Which nursing intervention can help in slowing the progression of rheumatoid arthritis?

Options:

- A. Encourage the client to rest in bed.
- B. Encourage the client to perform range of motion exercises.
- C. Encourage the client to take aspirin.
- D. Encourage the client to take prednisone.

Correct Answer: B. Encourage the client to perform range of motion exercises.

Rationale: Range of motion exercises help to maintain joint flexibility and prevent contractures, which can slow the progression of rheumatoid arthritis. Resting in bed is not recommended as it can lead to joint stiffness. Aspirin is not recommended due to the risk of bleeding. Prednisone is a corticosteroid that can help with inflammation but is not a nursing intervention.
