

- Social Psychology Study Guide Midterm 1

- Social Psychology: defined as the scientific study of the feelings, thoughts, and behaviours of individuals in social situations
- The Monitoring the Future Survey (Twenge, 2017)
  - o Surveyed 8th, 10th, and 12th grade students on an annual basis since 1991
  - o Students polled high in increasing depressive symptoms (f more than m students)
  - o Large difference could be also because more females chose to respond to the survey than more males
  - o Social media has an effect. Helps spread gender specific social pressures that may affect health
  - o Also an increase in knowledge of mental health so could just be that kids are noticing their emotions more and more
- Manipulating Facebook Use (Tromholt, 2016)
  - o People's life satisfaction level was being tested / as well as the amount of positive emotions they felt
  - o the experimental condition was people who were able to use facebook normally vs. people who had to abstain from using facebook
  - o people abstaining from facebook had higher levels of life satisfaction and higher levels of positive emotions
- Key Principles of Social Psychology:
  - o Behaviour is affected by a person's attributes as well as the situation they are in
  - o Our intuition naturally overestimates how much a person's traits affect their behaviour, and underestimate the influence of the situation on their behaviour (this is called the fundamental attribution error)
    - § We fail to appreciate the power of subtle situational influences.
    - § We make person attributions automatically and intuitively. By contrast, situation attributions require controlled, attention-demanding processing.
    - § Perceptual biases: when we observe behaviour the actor is often more perceptually salient than the background context/situation
  - o To predict and explain behaviour it is critical to analyze not just the objective situation but also the subjective situation as it appears from the actor's pov.
- Why do False Confessions occur?
  - o false confessions are a product of social influence
  - o police interrogations are theory-driven social interactions founded from a presumption of guilt
- Experimental Evidence of Social Influence
  - o Crime: Mock theft in which some participants took a key from a room and used it to steal $100 from a locked cabinet in a campus building.
  - o Manipulation of suspect's guilt:
    - § Guilty condition: suspects committed the mock theft before being interrogated
